THE DETROITS WIN AT LAST

Errors and Mishaps Enable Them to Defeat the Indianapolis Players.

Rittsburg Again Defeats Chicago-Boston and New York Win from Philadelphia and Washington-Local Club at Pittsburg To-day.

The Detroits yesterday broke their long record of defeats by winning a game from the Indianapolis club. The victory, however, was due more to a couple of mishaps than anything else. In one inning the sun blinded McGeachy, preventing him from catching an easy fly, and it sost two runs. In another inning Glasscock collided with Bassett, preventing him from completing an easy play and permitsing a run to come in. Glasscock's error in the seventh was also responsible for the other run. but it was a fumble and cannot be ascribed to poor luck or accident. While Burdick was batted with a great deal of regularity and gave frequent bases on balls, he always pitched after men got on bases, and his support been perfect the visitors could have been shut out. Buckley gave him fine support behind the bat. The visltors' victory was due to good fielding, for, although they made a couple of errors, they fielded very sharply during the greater portion of the game. Getzein worked hard, and had not McGeachy and Hines batted together in the and fourth innings he would have kept the locals from scoring. Wells, the Detroits' new catcher from the Western League, made his first appearance in this city, and caught a beautiful game. Although of comparatively light weight, he handled the bard throwing of Getzein with ease. He is very quick, and the only effort to steal a base on him proved unsuccessful. He did not show up well at the bat, however, his two-base hit in the eighth inning being a scratch. He caught the ball well up on the bat and lifted a short fly back of second. Hines tried to reach and catch it, and | again on the ground that he had not made a in doing so overran, the batter reaching second base. The game was not particularly eventful in the way of good plays, but was so close that the 1,500 spectators were kept interested all the time. Men were on the bases in every inning save the ninth.

The home club made a run in the second inn-ing, when McGeachy sent a fly over Twitchell's head for two bases. Denny struck out. but Getzein advanced the runner to third by a wild throw to second, and Hines brought him in by s fine drive to left. The visitors immediately passed this score. Ganzell, the first batter, lifted a fly to right. McGeachy was getting under it when the sun dazzled him, and he turned back, the batter reaching second Twitchell got a base on balls, but Wells struck out Getzein, however, filled the bases by a single to left, Seery's sharp fielding preventing Ganzell from trying to score. Campau forced Ganzell out at the plate, but Hanlon brought in two runs by a base hit. Hanlon, a moment later, was injured in attempting to make second base, and had to retire from the game. Bassett, who was covering the position, spiked him. Although it looked like Hanlon could hardly have been injured very seriously. Manager Watkins declares that he will be laid up for a week, and that his team will be thus further weakened. Beatin took Hanlon's place, and in the fourth inning, after McGeachy had made a hit, be failed to stop a ball, the batter reaching second. Hines again came to the rescue, and on his secand single to left McGeachy came home and tied the score. In the last ha' of the inning, however, the Detroits made what proved to be the winning run. Twitchell, the first batter, was given a base on balls and got second on Wells's sacrifice. Getzein's hit sent him to third, but Campau struck out, making the second out. Then Beatin furnished Bassett a grounder, which he had stopped nicely, when Glasscock suddenly ran into him, knocking him over and spoiling the play, while Twitchell scored. After that the home club did not come very near to a run, but the visitors increased their lead in the seventh, when White scored on Glasscock's fumble, Ganzell's long single and Twitchell's sacrifice.

In the ninth inning the first two Indianapolis batters were easily retired. Burdick, the third man, struck out. When two strikes were called Getzein looked around triumphantly, as if he thought the long-coveted victory was about to be recorded. When Burdick missed the third ball, and it settled safely into Wells's hands, the catcher dropped upon his knees, and Getzein threw himself prostrate upon the ground. All the other Detroit fielders followed his example, it being their method of signalizing the break in their long record of hard luck, and as the spectators looked on, they could not begradge them the victory. TWO GAMES AT PITTSBURG. PITTSBURG, Aug. 22.-The Pittsburgs and Chicagos played two games this afternoon and broke even. Chicago took the first game by timely hitting in the fourth inning, sided by the stupid battery work of Miller and Staley, who made four errors in quick succession. These, with two singles and a double, netted four runs and gave the visitors a lead that could not be overcome. Borchers was responsible for the loss of the second game. He pitched effectively for six innings and then weakened, allowing the home team to hit him at will. The visitors made a desperate effort to snatch victory from the jaws of defeat in the last, inning, and came close enough to make the spectators feel uneasy.

UNPARLIAMENTARY LANGUAGE. KANSAS CITY. Aug. 22 .- The feature of today's game between the Cowboys and the Paltimores was a quarrel between Umpire Doescher and Manager Barnie, of the visiting club, which cost the latter gentleman $100. The trouble occurred just after the last Baltimore man was put out, and was caused by one of Doescher's decisions, which sattled the question as to which club should win the game. In the last half of the ninth inning, with the score 5 to 4, two men out and the bases full. Greenwood came to bat. He was struck on the knee by a pitched ball and started to first. This, of course, forced in the tieing run, but Doescher sent the runners back and called Green wood to the bat proper effort to avoid being hit. Greenwood ended the game by flying out to McTammany.

While Doescher was in the reporters' stand, preparatory to leaving. Barnie approached him and spoke bitterly of the decision, winding up by calling the umpire a "stinker." "Twenty-five dollars," said the umpire,

"For calling me that name," was the answer. "Well, you are one, any way," retorted the This cost him $25 more, and on Barnie's suggestion the amount was raised to an even $100.

"What for?" asked Barnie.

Barnie ridiculed the umpire, saying that he had no authority to fine him after the game was over. "Read the book and see," was the laconic re-

The collogny was extremely bitter, and attracted the attention of the crowd who lingered, and of several policemen. The officers retired, however, when they saw that there was no occasion for their presence. During the game Goldeby objected to a decision on a foul ball, for which he drew $25, and on threatening to break Doescher's neck he was given $25 more. The game was close and interesting, and the home club won by bunching their hits. Score: KANSAS CITY.

A Murder Through Revenge. Chief of Police Henry Kline, of Hamilton, O. arrived in the city last night, having in custody-Homer Meyers, of that city, arrested on the charge of murder. He was on his way to Hamilton from Peoria, Ill., where Meyers was captured, and placed him in the police station over night. Meyers refused to talk on the subject, but the details of the crime were ascertained from Kline. On July 17. Myers, and two men named Thomas, entered the saloon of a Mr. Meskel, in Hamilton, and ordered drinks, but refused to pay for them. Leaving the saloon, they again returned in the course of an hour or more, and ordered liquor again, the man Myers displaying several bills as security of payment. When Meskel made the requisite change he deducted the price of the liquor that was first purchased and still uppaid for. This angered Meyers and his crowd, who left the saloon. Going to the rear door they broke into the kitchen, where Mrs. Meskel was seated, and by way of drunken revenge Meyers snatched a stick of stovewood and struck her several blows about the head and face. Just one month from that night she died. Myers fled from the city, but disappeared until a week ago, when he was discovered in Peoria, Ill., where Chief Kline secured him. He will be taken to Hamilton over the Big Four this morning. Killed by Cars. special to the Indianapolis Journal. EVANSVILLE, Aug. 22.—The city is crowded with strangers and has assumed a martial air. Beautiful weather has followed the rain of Monday, and the city now blooms forth in fresh decorations, more attractive than those ruined by the water. To-day's parade was the feature. It consisted of about 300 members of the Commercial Traveler's Club, of this city, uniformed in soft felt hate, linen dusters and satchels suspended from a strap over the shoulder. These were followed by about 2,000 militis in line, interspersed with numerous bands, the whole making a fine show. Thursday's feature will be the Knights of Pythias parade, and there will be fully 2,000 men in line. This promises to be one of the leading features of the day, as lodges from neignboring cities and towns are coming in force to compete for prizes in both parade and drill.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Aug. 22.-Two men have been holding religious meetings in a large tent at a small place in the northeast part of Montgomery county. Their names are John Pickett, of Linden, and a Mr. Edwards, a student of De-Panw University. Edwards is a son-in-law of Pickett, and they lived in a small tent adjoining the large one while the meetings were going on. They claimed to be Metnodists, not the latter-day sort, but the regular old-fashioned, John Wesley kind. They denonneed the organ and choir and advocated the mourner's bench, which had been abandoned by the churches of these days. They believed in shouting and weeping, and in seeing visions and dreaming dreams. They did not believe in being paid money for preaching, and refused all that was offered to them. They said that every man who could should preach the gospel without receiving money therefor. They remained two weeks, and several persons were converted to their teachings.

THE SALT INDUSTRY.

Some Plain Facts Showing the Effect of Putting Salt on the Free List.

Written for the Indiapapolis Journal. Recent investigations concerning the protection of salt in this country has shown some interesting facts regarding the effect of a low tariff on this important industry. During the year 1885 the total production of salt in the United States was 6,703,900 barrels. There was imported from foreign countries 3,100,000 barrels, making a total consumption for the year 1885 of 9,803,900 tarrels. The total production for 1887 would probably reach 7,000,000 barrels Michigan produces nearly one-half of all the salt manufactured in the United States, New York, Ohio, Louisiana, West Virginia, California and Pennsylvania rank next in importance, in the order in which they are named. In 1860 salt was on the free list, and the price was then $3 per barrel, and even at this price the Southern States were largely supplied by foreign importations. At the close of the war the large demand for salt by the Southern States stimulated the production of this country. The business, inflated by war prices, was for a time quite prodtable, but the development of the Michigan field, with the increase of foreign importations, together with the gradual decrease in the price of salt below living rates, except for localities that possess special advantages in the way of cheap fuel, strong brine or valuable bitter water, have proven disastrous to many companies. In many localities in Ohio the industry to-day presents a scene of the "survival of the fittest." Ruined furnaces are to be seen in every district, and where once was the scene of a busy industry is now a rained industry. The Hocking valley region is the most marked in this respect. The price has steadily declined from $3 per barrel in 1860, when on the free list, to $1.15 to-day, with 334 cents duty on each barrel. Foreign importations now supply nearly all the Southern and Eastern States, or about one-third of the total consumption of the Michigan, with strong brine, cheap fuel and valuable bitter water, cannot to-day compete with the cheaper labor of foreign countries in the production of salt, even with a duty of 33} cents per barrel. Why should not this country produce all the salt that it consumes, and why should we pay $3,000,000 annually to foreign labor when our own laborers are asking for work? These are questions that go straight home to every man that earns his bread by the sweat of his brow. This country can, and it should, produce every barrel of salt that it consumes. Our rocky strata are full of salt water, as has been clearly shown during the recent investigations for natural-gas. Fuel is cheap and labor is waiting for an opportunity. If our producers are unable to compete with foreign producers in the States of our own country distant from the centers of production when the duty is 33; cents per barrel, what would be the result if that duty was removed, as proposed by the Mills bill! It would cause the fires to go out of every furnace in the country, and would take from American laborers six millions of dollars of wages per year, besides the three millions we already pay for this one article alone. If the production of salt was bringing fair returns on the money invested, capital would not be slow to engage in its manufacture. That the capital of this country allows foreign productions to supply one-third of this country is proof that the business is not very profitable, and they cannot compete with the cheap foreign labor. The duty on salt should be increased until the production of our own country drives imported salt from our shores. Indiana is not to-day a salt-producing State, but with an abundance of sait water in both the lewer Helderberg and Trenton limestones, why should we not be able to develop an important industry here? A bed of salt of considerable thickness was reported from the lower Helderberg limestone at Columbia City, Whitley county, this State, while drilling for gas, and if it is true, sait water will probably be found here that will equal that of Michigan in richness. The explorations for natural gas have shown that Indiana possesses one of the largest natural-gas fields in the world, an area of about 2,600 square miles. They have also shown that Indiana is no longer dependent upon other States for her walt. All that is needed now is sufficient protection from foreign imporbuild up another important industry in our I go straight down midst, and thousands of laborers be given em-

The advocate of foreign industries in preference to our own will say to the glazier, the tanner, packer and the farmer, now, you pay too much for your salt; we will put salt on the free list, and you can then purchase it for 81; cents per barrel ($1.15, less the duty, 334 cente.) This, of course, would seem quite a saving to those who use large quantities of it, and the cry that you are all taxed higher than you ought to be may have some weight with those who see nothing but their own temporary interests. These some advocates of free salt will fail to state that though the wealthy companies or individuals who use the greater portion of the salt would be benefited, $6,000,000 would be taken from the pockets of the laboring men of this country each year. Placing salt on the free list would be helping the rich and robbing the poor, claims to being the friend of the laborer. It is safe to say that 90 per cent. of the cost of salt is due to the labor necessary to produce it. The average consumption of salt per capita for the United States is fifty pounds. Now the duty is 12 cents per one hundred pounds, and as only one third the salt used is imported it follows that the tax each individual pays as duty on salt is 2 cents. The free-trade advocates fail to state that the removal of $6,000,000 from circulation would react injuriously to their business; that the loss of sales would lose them an amount fully equal to the money saved on the price of salt. The above argument is based upon the presumption that if salt was placed on 'e free list the production in this cour. / would be suspended. This would certainly occur, or else the wages of the salt laborer, which now averages $1.25 per day, would be reduced to that of for eign countries. This reduction of wages would not only be detrimental to every frm of industry in this country, but it w course, be felt the hardest by the labore elf. The removal of the duty, and a red correspond, would take from ...e pockets of the workmen two millions of dollars per year, and who would be benefited except wealthy corpora-ent duty on salt. The loss in a single day to the laborer would be 33 cents, if the free-trade programme is carried out. But salt is only one of the many articles where the removal of the duty would benefit the rich and reduce the wages of the poor. Take, for instance, iron, wool, jute and chemicals; analyze the effect of a removal of the duty and it will be seen that in every case those most benefited are the wealthy, while the poor do not receive sufficient to counterbalance the loss from a reduction of wages for hardly a single day. A removal of the duty on sugar would save every laborer's family $5 per year and would not affect in any way the present wages of the workman. The hypocrisy of the free-trade supporters is best shown in their efforts to retain the duty on all articles that the poor man consumes. while seeking to remove it where the rich alone will be the gainer. Yet they claim to be the A. J. PHINEY. friend of the poor.

would result to the individual, indirectly, would

MUNCIE, Aug. 21. Summer Resort Gush.

If all that has been written about the belies of Saratoga, who have captured hearts, captivated minds and have gilded the memories of midsummer days at this summer capital in the years gone by-if all this could be collected, it would make a highly interesting volume. In more recent years the honors of this distinction have generally been divided among several ladies, none of whom have shone with acknowledged pre-eminence. This year, however, Saratoga has a genuine belle. whose title few or none will dispute. This is Miss Giulta Morosini, daughter of the famous New York financier. She is enjoying the summer a, the United States Hotel, and such a vision of grace and beauty adds to the enjoyment of all the other guests at that summer palace. Miss Morosini's charms of person are supplemented by tasteful and elegant costumes, and a gracious She is without question, the uncrowned queer of Saratoga in this summer of 1888, and her reign will long be remembered as one of the most brilliant in its history In saying this, if must not by any means be understood that there are not many other truly royal beauties here.
